
Peer Evaluations (Individual Assignment)

Team Evaluation

Team Number: 02
Lab Section: A
My Name: Gurumanie Singh Dhiman

This peer and self-evaluation of teamwork are intended to help you reflect on behaviors and attitudes that support effective teams on projects and in the workplace.

These evaluation numbers will not be used directly in grading group members. You will receive credit for completing the evaluation and taking a professional approach to reviewing your and your group's performance. In addition to the grade assigned to this peer evaluation, the team evaluation may only result in a lower project/assignment score for an individual student if there is group consensus across evaluation criteria that the individual did not contribute to the project/assignments.

Complete the tables on the next page. Write the name of each of your group members in a separate column.

For each person, indicate the extent to which you agree with the statement on the left, using a scale of 1-4 (1=strongly disagree; 2=disagree; 3=agree; 4=strongly agree). Total the numbers in each column.

1. Describe your most significant contribution to your team.

When we had our first ever call to discuss about our presentation, I guided the team on what each slide should say and provided a format for all of us to use. I also recommended additional sections when nobody else seemed to have any ideas for the slides since we had 6 members and were hoping for each member to have at least 2 slides to present.

2. Describe something you learned about working in a group from this class that you will carry into your next group experience.

I think I found it quite fascinating that all it took was 45 minutes for us to sort out who is doing which part for the presentation and discuss all the slides that will be needed. It was great to see how fast and smooth things can go in groups when everyone is respectful but also provides their own unique inputs. I found that to be my learning moment, when I realized that if all group meetings were as respectful and eager to listen as this group, things would move at a much quicker pace without much hassle.
